In those instances, the data or files should not be deleted, and the device must be handed to the police as soon as it is reasonably practicable.
  - o If the data or files are not suspected to be evidence in relation to an offence, the headteacher or an authorised member of staff may delete the images, data or files if the continued existence of the data or file is likely to continue to cause harm to any person and the pupil and/or the parent refuses to delete the data or files themselves.
