

SHADOW OF THE COLOSSUS

By Hayden

The breath-taking eagle swooped by the wanderer as fast as a cheetah and made his shiny brown hair sparkle while his hair was flapping in the wind. His eyes were green and glistened they were like emeralds.

Then suddenly there was a blinding light that took away the gloomy darkness he was speechless. As he went forwards his heart was beating, he went to find out what was there.

There in front of him stood a long bridge shaped like an animals rib cage. He was terrified as he was blinded by shiny lights. It looked completely magical and silent all the other things he has seen have all been pitch black. Below him he saw golden sand glimmering down below him. He saw a temple, he hoped it was something precious and expensive.

After he walked a little more he saw a lot of eagles circling the temple and looking like they were guarding the area. The door looked like it was waiting for him to come in. He may be entering the door of hell his horse whinnied of sadness.

He entered the dark temple, it had a spiralled staircase where he needed to go down. The horse went down it slow and steady the horse whinnied of sacredness as if he was going to fall down. He thought his life could have been gone but he finally got down. After they trotted the boy got off the horse and picked up a person. He put it on a table which was covered by lights, it could be magical and make this girl back to life.

The figure named Nico, had heard about the legend when he was a little boy. He stared at his dead sister with sadness. He bowed begging her to come back to life by something magic. Suddenly he heard something he got his sword out from his scabbard and turned around it was the dark beasts his sword was magic he killed all of them then there was lighting.

Then out of nowhere some person appeared his name was Dormin.

"Hello, can you bring my sister back to life?" begged Nico.

"I'll make you a deal, if you defeat one of the monsters on the wall I will bring her back to life," said the Dormin loudly.

The wanderer got prepared to do it he was not scared he will do it for his sister and that what brothers do. The figure had a big adventure to go.

The horse trotted to Nico, Nico got onto the horse and then the horse galloped out to the fields Nico put his sword in the air and shouted IM THE BEST. And then he got of his horse and saw a ruined castle. It had fallen to bits and started to climb up eventually he reached the top.

After Nico was walking acting like it was a journey he heard a piercing noise, he went to investigate what it was. It was a GIANT monster the monster was walking slowly and dirt and dust was flying in the air. Nico strode silently trying his best not to get caught by the strong fierce monster. He walked quickly the beast had a dazzling dark coat. He got his sword out from his scabbard and aimed it to his head got ya. He strolled silently and carefully climbed up his leg he kept thinking about his dead sister whilst he was trying to kill the deadly beast. He stabbed the monster in the leg and started to make him wobble, on one leg. He walked up and saw a bright blue light on his head he got his sword out and stabbed the monster in the head DEAD.

The monster fell on the floor and that made Nico fall to but Nico got up as fast as flash and that's how strong he is. He grabbed the monsters heart and runned back to the castle and said here is the heart and then he heard a colossal bang the wall had broken that had showed he had defeated the monster Bill. He gave the heart to Dormin and started to make the girl back to life.